on the safe.

It was said by a member of the firm Monday that it was thought the safe which was searched by the burglars had not been locked by those who last left the office. Either the burglars found it unlocked, or they found the combination, for the safe was not damaged. There were evidences, however, that the burglars had made an effort to open the other safe, with the aid of nitro-glycerine, as marks were found on the front, and the thieves apparently had tried to get the explosive inside.

The safe which was searched by the burglars contained nothing of value, the books and valuable papers of the company being in the other safe, a large one weighing several thousand pounds. The robbers therefore obtained nothing for their pains.
